Campfire Girls
Receive Greetings
of Mrs. Harding
Five Hundred Young Women
Take Part in Outdoor Fete of Organization.

Each of the 500 Camp Fire Girls who took part in the outdoor programme staged yesterday afternoon on the top of Lookout Hill, in Prospect Park, carried away at the end of the day a special message from Mrs. Harding, wife of the President.

Mrs. Harding is interested in the activities of this organization and when Mrs. Oliver Harriman, the new national president, invited the President's wife to attend the festivities, Mrs. Harding sent regrets, but added friendly greetings to all the Camp Fire Girls.

Her letter, which was read to the gathering, said: "It would have given me great pleasure to have been a guest of the Camp Fire Girls in New York, but since that is not possible I want to take this opportunity to send to every Camp Fire Girl wherever she may be, my greetings and wish that each succeeding year may bring her nearer the goal of splendid womanhood, which is the aim of all her training."

In the morning a score of girls, dressed in ceremonial costumes, went about the city in a Fifth Avenue bus carrying flowers to four of the Manhattan hospitals. They bore huge armfuls to the children's wards where infantile paralysis cases are cared for. Those donating plants and flowers were Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mr. Adolph Lewisohn, Mrs. Willard Straight, Mrs. Shepherd K. de Forest, Mrs. Albert Shore, Miss Edna Tate, Mrs. I. L. Bristol, the National Plant, Fruit and Flower Guild, Mrs. William L. Sawyer, Miss Sara H. Childs, Mrs. Ruth Levy, Mrs. William A. Bradley and Mrs. C. B. Close.

Sports on top of Lookout started with a kite flying and a tent raising contest. Then there was a health chart pantomime, illustrating some of the wholesome activities recommended by the organization to keep its members in good form. These included exhibitions of setting up exercises, tooth brush drill, opening the windows, dressing and taping.

The biggest camp fire ever built on Lookout top, at least since the days of the early Indians, was touched off by a Camp Fire girl. Big logs had been rolled to the centre of the clearing just below the lookout, and here the Indian robed maidens went through their chief ceremonial. Simultaneously fires of the same kind were lighted in Chicago, Los Angeles, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Baltimore and elsewhere where Camp Fire Girls' Day was being observed.

Sixty Camp Fire groups of Brooklyn, eight of Queens and eight of Manhattan were represented. Mrs. Harriman, the new national president, received the greetings of the girls. Mr. John H. Harmon, Park Commissioner, extended the city's welcome and Miss Marguerite Smith, member of the Assembly, delivered a short address. She urged the young women to follow the Camp Fire teachings. Speaking of her work in the Assembly she said that she was rather lone some and that she was anxiously looking forward to the time when she would not be the sole women member of the body.

Some of the members of the Camp Fire Guardians Association of Brooklyn and others who were present were Mrs. Elizabeth D. Cunningham, chairman; Miss Adele Mohl, Miss Mattie Ford, Mrs. Wilmer von Herbert, Mrs. O. D. Hersenbulte, Miss Dorothy Coverly, Mrs. Royal K. de Forest, member of the national board; Mrs. Alice McKay Kelley, national vice-president; Mrs. Besse Abbott, Mrs. Anna Chapman, Miss Kay Trautman, Miss Charlotte Kiss and Miss Margaret Young, member of the Brooklyn board.

Woman Paints
Immigrant Types
at Ellis Island

Clergy Club Exhibits Canvases of Future Americans by Susan Ricker Knox.

The Clergy Club of New York and Neighborhood is showing for one week at its rooms, 200 Fifth avenue, a somewhat unusual group of paintings by Susan Ricker Knox depicting immigrant types. The canvases, thirty-two in number, were made at Ellis Island, between January and May of the present year and were painted while the daily process of receiving and inspection were uninterruptedly going on.

There is evidence in these swiftly brushed-in studies of the haste with which it was necessary that the artist should work, for there was no assurance when a group was commenced that the members of it might not be shifted or entirely snatched away before the study was complete. Yet as documents of the life that is surging in a continuous stream through the gateway to America these oil studies, swift and literal as they are, have value which more arranged and idealized productions would undoubtedly lack.

The aesthetic values which the artist has sacrificed are atoned for in the mind of the average person by the interest of her subject. Her sitters are women and children, grandmothers and babes in arms, Czechs and Greeks and Italians and Jews, prospective Americans all, taken tired and patient and hopeful, just as they come to the mill and just as they wait for the turning of the machinery that shall pass them on to beyond the barriers to the land of their opportunity. There is gay color in plenty in headresses and aprons and in the occasional gorgeous peasant costume, and the faces themselves are inspiration enough for an entire school of artists. Miss Knox has seized her decorative opportunities where she has found them in these great bare white rooms at Ellis Island, but her greatest interest has been in the human side of her spectacle in her types and in their states of mind and body.
